Indonesia's sprawling capital is one of the fastest-growing, most chaotic and most exciting places in South East Asia. It is the gateway to a vast, vibrant and varied island nation that's home to dozens of fascinating cultures.

Formerly the colonial capital of the Dutch East Indies – when it was known as Batavia – Jakarta has grown from its original seaport district into a huge modern conurbation of high-rise hotels and apartments, thronged shopping malls and wide, busy avenues.

THE CITY

Photo: pwbaker

You can see Jakarta growing and expanding, with new suburbs springing up on its outskirts and new high-rises reaching for the sky in the downtown area. The hub of the modern city is Taman Merdeka (Independence Square), which is dominated by the showy, 132 metre tall National Monument, crowned by a glittering, stylised metal flame.Taman Fatahilla is the epicentre of Kota, the original heart of Dutch Batavia, and still has a sprinkling of picturesque old buildings.

The nearby Glodok district is the heart of Jakarta's substantial Chinese community, and in recent years has also seen gentrification. Sunda Kelapa, the old port, is lined with warehouses dating back to the colonial era and filled with old-fashioned schooners that still carry cargo between Jakarta and the outlying islands. South of the centre, Jalan Jaksa is a colourful thoroughfare, lined with antique and souvenir shops, cheap restaurants, guesthouses and tour agencies.

DO & SEE

Taman Ismail Marzuki (TIM)

TIM is the country's main venue for traditional and contemporary cultural events, including dance, drama, music and film. There are frequent appearances by troupes of dancers from Bali and elsewhere and by gamelan musicians. You can find the monthly calendar of events at hotels and tourist offices, or check the Jakarta Post for listings.

Address: 73 Jalan Cikini Raya
Phone: +62 21 3193 6535

Masjid Istiqlal (National Mosque)

This huge modern mosque stands on the northeast side of Taman Merdeka, with its graceful dome and soaring minaret reflected in a mirror-like pool. Completed in 1978, it was designed by the Indonesian architect Frederic Silaban (himself a Christian), and is the largest mosque in Southeast Asia, with room for more than 10,000 worshippers.

Address: 1 Jalan Veteran

Museum Wayang

This museum is dedicated to keeping alive the ancient Indonesian art of shadow-puppetry, with a collection of colourful silhouette-puppets from all over Java and Indonesia. There are live performances of this vanishing art every Sunday morning, accompanied by gamelan music.

Address: 27 Jalan Pintu Besar Barat 20
Phone: +62 21 692 9560

EATING

The lure of Jakarta's bright lights has attracted Indonesian migrants from all over this huge country. As a result, the capital's menu is stupendously varied. Staples such as noodles and nasi goreng (mixed fried rice) are on the menu everywhere, but there's much more to try. Chicken and beef are the most common fowl and meat dishes – Indonesia is predominantly a Muslim country, and pork is a rarity.

Java Bleu

Best restaurant in Jakarta, and certainly one of the most expensive and exclusive. Book well in advance if you want to eat here – Java Bleu is open only from 5 pm-10 pm, Tuesday to Saturday, has only 20 places, and is much in demand. The menu is classic French.

Address: 15 Jalan R S Fatmawati
Phone: +61 21 769 7291
Internet: www.javableu.com

Seafood Terrace

The Grand Hyatt's seafood restaurant is probably the best place in town for fresh fish, lobster and other seafood dishes prepared in a variety of Asian and European styles.

Address: Jalan M. H. Thamrin Kav. 28-30
Phone: +62 21 2992 1234
Internet: www.jakarta.grand.hyatt.com

Dapur Baba

The best Indonesian restaurant in town, serving Javan, colonial Dutch and Peranakan (Straits Chinese) dishes in picturesque dining rooms decorated with Indonesian and colonial antiques. It also boasts the excellent Tao Bar.

Address: 18 Jalan Veteran
Phone: +62 21 7060 2256

Para Para

This traditional Indonesian restaurant in the Kemang area offers very good value for the money and an array of typical dishes from Java and beyond.

Address: Jalan Bangka Raya St. No. 3
Phone: +62 21 7179 1919

Dapur Anggrek Food Court

The biggest, best and most salubrious of Jakarta's many food courts, with lots of different vendors selling regional specialities from every corner of the archipelago, at rock bottom prices.

Address: Taman Anggrek Mall
Internet: www.taman-anggrek-mall.com

Asia Restaurant - The Ritz-Carlton

This Asian restaurant is located in The Ritz-Carlton Hotel and serve international food, prepared in an open kitchen and offer everything from generous breakfast spreads to warm, delicious bowls of noodles at dinner. The restaurant also have one of Jakarta's largest buffet.

CAFES

Indonesia is not Paris when it comes to café culture but here are a couple of good suggestions.

Ya Udah

Excellent café-restaurant serving light meals, snacks and drinks all day. Ya Udah is upscale by Jalan Jaksa standards, but still well within most budgets. The menu is international with a few Indonesian favourites.

Address: Jalan Johar, 15
Phone: +62 21 314 4121

La Moda

In the atrium of the upscale Plaza Indonesia shopping mall, this smart café is actually attached to the neighbouring Grand Hyatt hotel and hosts regular fashion shows.

Address: Plaza Indonesia

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Jakarta is a fast growing city of entertainment! Here you will find everything from bars to chic clubs and karaoke, it is just to take a pick on what you would like for the night.

Burgundy

This cosmopolitan (and pricey) bar in one of Jakarta's best hotels attracts a sophisticated crowd and serves some of the best cocktails in town. Burgundy is one of Jakartas chicest hot spots.

Address: Grand Hyatt Hotel
Phone: +62 21 390 1234
Internet: www.jakarta.grand.hyatt.com

Bats

This bar in the Shangri-La is highly rated by residents and frequent visitors, with live music from international bands. Very busy (standing room only) at weekends, small dance floor, restaurant serving light meals.

Address: Shangri-La Hotel, Jalan Sudirman
Phone: +62 21 570 7440

Churchill

The lobby lounge of the Hotel Borobudur has a clubby feel, with big armchairs, a billiard table and a fine choice of wines and cigars. It's a good place for a quieter, relaxing evening.

SHOPPING

Over the last decade Jakarta has become a major shopping destination, with numerous brand new, air-conditioned shopping malls springing up all over the city, in competition with established malls and department stores such as Blok M, while international department store chains such as Sogo, Mark's and Spencer's and Metro have also made an appearance.

Good buys include traditional ikat and batik textiles, traditional and modern wood carvings from Bali and other islands, antique pottery and Dutch colonial antiques (though these are very often faked). Many international sports and leisure wear brands have factories in Jakarta and sports footwear, sports clothing and designer wear are available at good prices.

Taman Anggrek is the city's largest shopping and leisure mall and is part of a huge residential tower complex on the airport toll road, so it is convenient for last-minute shopping before you leave Jakarta. Seven floors of shops sell designer fashions, sportswear, electronic goods, souvenirs, gifts and authentic antiques. It also has an extensive food court. It is a favourite weekend spot for Indonesian families, with an average of 100,000 visitors each weekend.

Blok M is the city's longest established mall and is a popular local rendezvous, with cafés, bars and restaurants along with an extensive array of designer boutiques, drugstores and souvenir stores. There are gift boutiques and arts and craft stores in the lobbies of most of the large international hotels along Jalan Thamrin, as well as international newsstands. Also on Jalan Thamrin is the flagship branch of Sarinah, the Indonesian department store chain – it sells batik clothing, designer wear, sports equipment and leisure goods and is a good place to pick up bargain priced tropical clothing, swimwear and camping equipment.

Jalan Jaksa, the old-fashioned shopping street that is also where most of Jakarta's budget travel facilities are located. It is lined with antique and craft stores, selling Chinese and Indonesian antique pottery, wood carving, textiles, colonial-style furniture and brassware. There is a thriving trade in antique' navigational aids such as sextants, ships' compasses and chronometers, all of which, though apparently aged, are in fact newly made in local workshops. Don't be ashamed to haggle determinedly over prices – the initial asking price will always be very much more than the price you finally agree to pay.

Palaza Senayan has a good choice of Indonesian designer boutiques, including Sebastian's, Ghea and Biyan, all of which offer stylish modern evening wear and colourful traditional dresses, suits, jackets, shirts and blouses. The Sogo Seni handicraft centre, with Plaza Senayan's branch of Sogo, has one of the best selections of Indonesian handicrafts.

ESSENTIAL INFORMATION

Airport

Soeharto-Hatta International Airport is 20 km from the city centre.

Taxis take around 30 minutes. Fixed price Silver Bird Taxis should be arranged at the taxi desk in the arrivals hall, immediately after passing through Customs and Immigration. DAMRI Bus Service operates between the airport and downtown every 40 minutes, and costs Rp 10 000-20 000 depending on trip length journey time is around one hour to Blok M or Gambir Railway Station in the central business district.

Facilities at the airport include currency exchange, post office, business centre, tourist information desk, car rental desks and tax free shopping. All main hotels offer mini-bus shuttle transfers or chauffeur-driven meet-and-greet service.

Internet: www.jakartaairportonline.com

Public transport

Jakarta has a range of transport options. Buses are operated by a range of private operators and by the state-owned PPD bus company. Mayasari and Patas AC buses are air conditioned. Flat fares are charged and are posted by the entrance door. Three-wheeled, two-seat scooter taxis (bajaj) and bemo minibuses also operate, as do mikrolet or angkot minibuses on fixed routes.

No public transport information websites or telephone numbers available.

Taxi

For the visitor, however, taxis are the most sensible option as all other options are crowded, slow and petty theft is common. The most reliable taxi companies include Silver Bird and Blue Bird. Drivers should carry a rate sheet showing the current fare to most destinations – check the fare before getting into the taxi. More sensibly, ask your hotel or restaurant to call a cab for you. Blue Bird also offers a premium Golden Bird limousine service, which can be booked through your hotel or on the company's web site.

Phone: +62 21 794 1234
Internet: www.bluebirdgroup.com

Post

Stamps can be bought at most hotel front desks or lobby shops.

There are post offices throughout the city, generally open 8 am-4 pm or 9 am-5 pm Monday-Friday.

Pharmacy

There are well stocked pharmacies in all the main shopping malls and department stores, and there is a 24 hour, seven days a week pharmacy within the Grand Hyatt Hotel.
