Bergerac, in the heart of the Périgord Dordogne region, is an ancient and compact city, characterised by its elegant medieval and Renaissance buildings. Gourmet restaurants, street entertainment, and the fact that the whole city can be explored on foot are all part of its charm. Bergerac is also renowned for its wine, and a short trip to the outskirts of the city reveals a landscape of vineyards that produce some of the world's finest vintages.

THE CITY

Heliosphile / Shutterstock.com

Bergerac is a small modern city that celebrates its long history. The picturesque old town is full of medieval half-timbered houses, elegant 17th-century houses, and the city's largest square, Pélissière Place. And do not forget the picturesque Dordogne river that flows peacefully through the city.

A gentle walk around the city will reveal interesting museums and other tourist attractions like the statue of Cyrano de Bergerac, the hero of Edmond Rostand's famous comedy, and there are also plenty of street markets buzzing with activity. Then, of course, there are Bergerac's restaurants, which come to life in the evenings. It is possible to enjoy the finest truffles or wild boar with one of Bergerac's world famous wines, including its Monbazillac and Côtes de Bergerac.

DO & SEE

PHB.cz (Richard Semik) / Shutterstock.com

There is so much to discover in this small picturesque town. There are plenty of historical buildings to explore such as Château De Lanquais and Château De Monbazillac. A gentle walk around the city will also reveal Romanesque churches and interesting museums, such as the Musée du Tabac and the Maison des Vins. Venture further afield to take in the beautiful Dordogne countryside.

La Maison Des Vins De Bergerac

SHOPPING

pilipphoto / Shutterstock.com

While Bergerac has lots of little specialty shops where locals and tourists alike can find designer fashions, china, glassware, jewellery and perfumes, the city revolves around its food and wines. Visit some of the local 'caves' to sample some local delicacies and vintages before choosing one to take home with you.

Markets

At almost every turn, and on most days of the week, Bergerac hosts markets that are not so much a place to purchase the freshest of food or antiques, but a social event at which to catch up with friends. The food markets are held on Wednesdays and Saturdays til around midday in the Notre-Dame church and Sainte-Catherine area and the covered market close-by.

At the Place de la Madeleine, there's a farmers' market on Fridays til around noon, while Tuesdays there is an organic food market at the Place Doublet. Fresh fruit and vegetables along with cheeses, truffles and meats, vinaigrettes, herbs and, of course, local wine can all be purchased. There are also summer markets, candlelit evening markets and flea markets. The Place Gambetta hosts a general market on Wednesdays and Saturdays.
