Vienna fires our imagination with sweeping waltzes and balls at the Opera, beautiful buildings, the Spanish Riding School and traditional cafés. That being said, even with all this history and tradition, Vienna also has a very different side – its young, trendy and creative side. In the Freihausviertel, creativity thrives and young designers and artists exhibit and sell their work.

THE CITY

© Luca Sartoni

Vienna is a metropolis that never forces itself upon you - there is an elegant feeling about the place. Vienna succeeds in uniting its historical heritage with the spirit of the new age. It's no exaggeration to say that Vienna has something for everyone. In the Museum district's cultural complex, they have integrated the large art museums with trendy young boutiques, clubs and bars complete with DJs. Not far from the Stephansplatz (St Stephen's Square - the heart of Vienna), you will find fashionable areas with the smartest shops, cafés and delicatessens. In the Neubau and Freihausviertel, there are bars, shops and studios pulsating with creative zest. Nevertheless Vienna is home to Mozart and Beethoven and has one of the world's greatest symphony orchestras and a world class opera house. The oldest and most central areas of the city lie within what is called the "Ring," the Ringstrasse, Vienna's main street laid out where the city walls used to stand. A trip around the Ring on tram numbers 1 or 2 is a smart way to get a quick overview of the city and to see many of Vienna's sights. The city is divided up into 23 districts, Bezirk, identified by a number in front of addresses. The most central districts are 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9.

SHOPPING

© Cha già José

The longest and best known shopping street is Mariahilfer Strasse, situated between the city centre and the Westbahnhof (West Station). The large cheap chain stores with shoes, clothes and jewelry are found here. Don't forget the side streets, such as Neubaugasse, where you'll find young playful fashions, plenty of comical T-shirts, handbags, gadgets and things from the '60s and Manga or Hello Kitty. Other well known shopping streets are Kärntner Strasse, Graben and Kohlmarkt. These are, as well as several other inner city streets, traffic-free pedestrian precincts. In the MQ museum complex, there are several small intriguing boutiques with clothes and accessories from young designers. If you prefer exclusive shopping, the fashion houses – with the likes of Chanel, Gucci, Cartier, Louis Vuitton – are sometimes cheek by jowl. In district 1, you'll find Armani. At Kohlmarkt 3 - Gucci, and Chanel at Kohlmarkt 5. Vienna is the home city of the world famous designer Helmut Lang, and, not surprisingly, he has his own shop with fashions for both men and women (Seilergasse 6, District 1). The Freihaus district between Operngasse to Heumühlgasse, has been compared to the Latin Quarter in Paris or New York's Greenwich Village. As a general rule, the main street in every Bezirk (district) has many shops. Remember to take cash, because not all shops accept cards.
