Aarhus lives up to its "smallest big city" motto. It's petite enough to conquer in a weekend, yet buzzing with enough energy to rival Copenhagen. This is where Danish hygge meets youthful innovation: think Michelin-starred dining alongside quirky food markets, avant-garde architecture framing half-timbered houses, and world-class museums (don't miss the rainbow panorama at ARoS). By night, craft cocktail bars and live music venues prove size doesn't dictate ambition.

THE CITY

Guillaume Baviere/Flickr (image cropped)

Aarhus was founded by the Vikings some 1300 years ago, and has been an important trading city ever since. However, it was not until the 1900's that Aarhus really started growing and soon became Denmark's second largest city after the capital of Copenhagen.

Dubbed the cultural capital of Denmark (and proudly holding the title of European Capital of Culture for the year 2017), Aarhus has been at the forefront of defining Danish art and culture for years, which also shows through the city's architecture and the up-and-coming designer shops and boutiques popping up across Aarhus. Denmark's second city is also very musical - once home to a burgeoning music scene (many of the nation's iconic bands started here), it now carries its cultural legacy through the annual International Jazz, SPoT, and NorthSide Festivals.

DO & SEE

dite/unsplash

The relatively large influx of young people and students from across the Nordic countries creates a natural base for cultural activities, and there are countless cafes as well as clubs, cinemas, museums, parks and various other venues of entertainment. Each year, the town hosts several festivals and concerts including Aarhus International Jazz Festival in July and Aarhus Festuge in September — the biggest themed festival in Scandinavia.

Tivoli Friheden

The city's amusement park Tivoli Friheden offers a range of fun and exciting attractions for all ages. Located outside the city centre, just a couple kilometres to its south, Tivoli Friheden enjoys a location amidst lush forest greenery. Please mind that opening hours may vary by week.

DINING

Kzenon/Shutterstock.com

There are plenty of eating places in downtown Aarhus. The obvious places can be found on the main streets, but by wandering around in the small side alleys, you can also find other cosy eateries at sometimes cheaper prices. If you want to taste a good old Danish dish, try out the esteemed Pinden Restaurant (listed below).

Aarhus Street Food

The Aarhus Street Food space is the brand-new and, arguably, hippest addition to the Aarhus dining scene. With a collection of dozens of cafes and restaurants serving all kinds of world cuisines imaginable under one roof, the now refurbished former garage is an excellent place to go if you don't quite know what you're in the mood for.

CAFES

Jordan Lye/Shutterstock.com

Scandinavians love their coffee, so locating a cafe or coffee shop does not present much difficulty in Aarhus. Sit down in one of the cosy cafes--many offer outdoor seating during the summer months--and watch the world go by.

Cafe Gemmestedet

Cafe Gemmestedet is a really cosy cafe with a relaxed atmosphere and classic cafe dishes. There is a selection of board games so you can enjoy a game of chess or backgammon. In the evenings, the cafe takes on a new ambience of a casual bar, with special 2-for-1 offers available on cocktails of the day.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Pressmaster/Shutterstock.com

There are many bars in Aarhus, and the vibrant student life in the city is what keeps the nightlife perky, even on weeknights. Many night cafes and bars can be found by the picturesque riverside downtown or in the narrow streets of the city centre. Many clubs offer live music on most nights of the week. Clubs sometimes charge a fee depending on the band performing.

Pinds Cafe

This is one of Aarhus' oldest establishments and somewhat of a local institution. First established in 1936, Pinds Cafe soldiers on under new ownership and still serves traditional Danish food, as well as coffee and cocktails. Open half-day four days a week.

SHOPPING

oneinchpunch/Shutterstock.com

Aarhus is a perfect location for a shopping spree with plenty of shops and shopping centres to choose from, all within walking distance. There is everything to fulfil a shopper's fantasy with fashion, design, and trendsetting lifestyle items in exclusive and unique shops. At the same time, the laid-back attitude of the Aarhusianians and the city's slower pace also make shopping in Aarhus a stress-free experience.

Bruun's Galleri

Just next to the main train station is Bruun's Galleri, a new stylish shopping centre selling almost everything money can buy from sweets to art and from shoes to lamps. The on-site cinema plays movies in English, and the mall itself is directly connected to the central train station.

Public Transport

Aarhus city centre is compact and easy to cover by foot. For longer trips, the city's bus network is extensive.

Tickets can be purchased at the machine in the rear of the bus and last for two hours. An Aarhus Pass is well worth it if you are planning to do a lot of sightseeing in town and you can choose between 24 and 48 hours. You can buy all your tickets at the Aarhus Bus Station.

A Dutch top-up transportation card ("rejsekort") works all across Denmark and is the most convenient option for longer stays.

Cycling is a great way to get around Aarhus. More than 250 bikes are distributed around the city (April 1 - Oct 30) free of charge. For longer bike rides, you can rent bicycles from several providers in town.
