Palm trees swaying in the wind, crystal turquoise seas, and seemingly endless stretches of talcum powder-white sand beaches, along with a distinctively laid-back way of life, characterise this beautiful island. Boracay offers everything from golf, trekking, sailing, and water sports such as windsurfing and scuba diving, to great hotels, gourmet restaurants, and festivals. Additionally, you can enjoy its fabulous beaches, including White Beach, which has been voted among the finest in the world.

THE ISLAND

Elena Yakusheva/Shutterstock.com

One of the Philippines' most popular tourist destinations, Boracay island lies just off the coast of Panay in the western Visayas region. It comprises thirteen areas, known by the Filipino name of Barangays, including Manoc-Manoc and Balabag.

Boracay became an independent state in the 1950s, and was something of a secret until a film crew "discovered" the island while filming in the area in the 1970's. Once the secret was out, tourists began arriving and have continued to do so ever since.

Boracay is probably most famous for its beaches, especially the White Beach, which is around four kilometres long. It is the island's main tourist beach known the world over. The sea is especially shallow here, which makes it safe for water sports. The beach is lined with hotels and restaurants, some of them directly on the waterfront, others separated by a long esplanade.

There are other beaches, too, including the quieter Diniwid Beach and the second largest Bulabog Beach, which is popular among windsurfers, kitesurfers and kiteboarders. In fact, the brightly coloured sails are a part of the beach's identity. Boracay is also famous for its nature and eco-trekking, its bargain shopping in markets, diving, parties and the many spas found in its holiday resorts.

DO & SEE

VukToskovic/Shutterstock.com

Relaxing on its beautiful beaches is, perhaps, the top choice of many tourists who visit Boracay, but there are many other attractions and things to do. Boracay, for instance, is a magnet for festival-goers and sport event enthusiasts. Special events include dragon boat races, the Paraw regatta sailing race, and the open Asian Frisbee beach tournament held every summer — an important event for Boracay's own top ranking team, the Boracay Dragons.

Golfing enthusiasts can enjoy the world-class 18-hole par 72 Fairways & Bluewater Resort Golf & Country Club course. Nature lovers, on the other hand, can explore the natural areas of rice terraces, waterfalls and lush plantations around the Tibiao whitewater river, where the most adventurous ones can even go whitewater rafting.

White Beach

White Beach is considered to be one of the best beaches in the world. The four-kilometre stretch of sugary, fine white sand and the crystal clear blue water is the first thing that comes to mind when you picture paradise. This is where most of the island's hotels, restaurants and bars are located.

Windsurfing

Every January, Bulabog beach is abuzz with locals and visitors who come to see or even take part in the Boracay International Funboard Cup Competition.

Windsurfing and kite-surfing are popular activities all year round. There are several companies across the island that offer classes and courses for beginners and advanced surfers.

Ariel's Point

If you take a 30-minute boat ride from Boracay Island, you will find a cliff jumping spot called Ariel's Point. The views here are stunning, and the trip is an enjoyable experience whether or not you decide to go cliff diving. Participants can choose the height they're comfortable with.

Ati-Atihan Festival

The two-week long Ati-atihan festival takes place the third Sunday of January each year. People throughout the Philippines wear elaborate fancy dress costumes and make-up.

They party with music, dances and carnivals. The religious festival is held in a nearby municipality and is in honour of the Holy Infant Jesus, a patron saint of the Cebu region.

Puka Shell Beach

Contrary to White Beach, Puka Shell Beach is much less crowded. This is a stretch of white sand that is a must-visit for all travellers to the island.

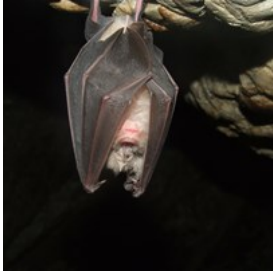

Given its convenient location, in the north of Boracay, it is usually included in most beach-hopping itineraries. There are quite a few bars around, some of them offer complimentary sun beds if you buy a drink.

Mountain Biking & Hiking

What better way to discover the island than to put on your hiking shoes and get out there? You are sure to find remote places and breathtaking scenery. There are paths criss-crossing the whole island. Some of the best hiking trails are the Boracay Trail, Mount Ilijan and Calimbajan Peak. If you prefer renting a mountain bike, you can do so pretty much anywhere along White Beach.

Located at Station 1, Willy's Rock is somewhat of an iconic location on the island of Boracay. The best time to visit is during low tide. This beach is also home to some of the island's best sunsets, so stay until the sun goes down and watch it disappear behind the horizon.

DINING

italay/Shutterstock.com

Boracay has a huge choice of restaurants to suit all tastes and pockets — from local eateries to lavish gourmet-style venues. Dishes like char-grilled chicken, meat cooked to perfection over coals accompanied by salads and local vegetables, or fish caught fresh from the sea, marinated and grilled, can be found on most tables.

Try grilled prawns with bacon and avocado, fresh Oriental-style spring rolls, or delicacies like seared tuna with soy sauce. The hotels and resorts tend to have a selection of restaurants too, serving both Filipino and international cuisines.

I Luv Backyard BBQ Grill

The busy I Luv Backyard BBQ Grill is located at D'Mall, the island's busiest shopping village. Their chicken and pork dishes include tasty treats such as litson kawali, crispy pata, sisig and of course roasted and fried chicken. Their seafood menu is just as extensive.

CAFES

Maria Timofeeva/Shutterstock.com

There are plenty of cafes and casual eateries to choose from in Boracay. Some offer international foods like burgers, pizzas and kebabs, while others specialise in local delicacies like spring rolls and rice dishes that are ideal as a light snack.

As for salads, they often contain fruit like mango or pineapple diced in along with lettuce and other veggies. Fruit is also the main ingredient of the colourful, vitamin-packed smoothies — a very popular drink among both visitors and locals.

Jonah's Fruit Shake Boracay

A must when visiting a tropical island is definitely to enjoy a fresh fruit shake. A good place to do that is Jonah's Fruit Shake Boracay. They also serve breakfast, lunch, fruit bowls and other snacks. The best-selling shake is the

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Cor Meenderinck/Shutterstock.com

Boracay is the party capital of the Philippines. Taking a stroll along the waterfront at night will almost certainly mean stumbling upon lively beach bars and dance clubs. Nightlife establishments are usually rather informal, and the dance floor or the seating area is often directly on sand.

Stations 1 and 2, on the northern end of White Beach, are known for being the lively party areas. Conversely, Station 3 is a better fit for those looking to spend a relaxed evening listening to the sound of the waves.

Summer Place

Summer Place is a fun open bar facing the beach. Easily the hottest nightlife venue in the Station 2 area, if not on the entire island. Summer Place has a rather compact dance floor, which often extends directly onto the beach. Arrive early to avoid the entrance fee.

SHOPPING

BlueOrange Studio/Shutterstock.com

Shopping in Boracay revolves around its fabulous markets and speciality shops. As befits an island community, there are multiple corner shops selling items of beachwear, water sports attire, swimming costumes and the like. The island's largest market is Talipapa, a must-visit if you are looking for local crafts and fresh seafood. Local craftsmen produce intricate wood carvings, leather items, musical instruments, and jewellery.

Heidiland Deli

When you grow tired of the tropical Filipino cuisine, change it up by visiting this little place. European treats such as fine wines, chocolates, freshly baked breads, deli cuts and cheese platters are their specialities. Prices are above average, as most products are specially imported.

Godofredo P. Ramos Airport (MPH)

The best way to reach Boracay from Cebu or Manila is by air. Flights arrive into the small Godofredo P. Ramos Airport, also known as 'Caticlan Airport,' on Panay Island regularly from other islands or the mainland. Services are operated by Philippine Airlines, Cebu Pacific Air, and Royal Air Philippines, which has charter flights to Hong Kong, Nanjing, Taipei and Shanghai-Pudong.

The airport is minutes away from the jetty port from where banca boats leave for Cagban Beach throughout the day. The ferry takes approx. 10-20 minutes. There are different companies arranging transfers from this point to Boracay.
