THE ISLANDS

Don Mammoser/shutterstock

Fiji's 332 islands are scattered over a vast area of the Pacific Ocean, some 1,283,000 square kilometres in extent. Viti Levu, the main island of Fiji, is about 10,400 square kilometres in area, with high rainfall in the east and much lower rainfall in the west. The country's first and third biggest cities — Suva and Nadi respectively — are located at opposite ends of Viti Levu, like sentinels guarding against enemy invasion. These days, the "invaders" are friendly, coming as tourists rather than cannibal-warriors.

Because of the consistently bad weather conditions, Fiji's main international airport was moved to Nadi in 1982. As a result, most of Fiji's tourist development and facilities are concentrated around Nadi and the southern "Coral Coast" of Viti Levu. Nadi is also a great base for exploring the Mamanuca and Yasawa island groups, the southern island of Kadavu, and the "garden island" of Taveuni, with easy access also to the laid-back port of Savusavu on Vanua Levu Island.

DENARAU ISLAND

Sites Around the World/Shutterstock.com

Less than 10 kilometres from Nadi, Denarau is an upscale resort island accessed via a causeway from the main island of Viti Levu. Built on former mangrove swamps, Denarau is a man-made sanctuary comprising eight integrated hotel resorts, including six world-class resorts.

Port Denarau Marina

The upmarket marina at Port Denarau has restaurants, cafés and a stage for hosting traditional Fijian performances.

Restaurants offer everything from South Pacific and Indian cuisines, to pizza and ice-cream, while there is a spacious seated area with picturesque views across the water especially beautiful at sunset.

Denarau Golf & Racquet Club

Fiji's premier championship golf course is not only an 18-hole, par-72 golfer's paradise but is also internationally renowned for its extensive water challenges, including man-made lakes and water hazards that test even the most seasoned players. The only thing more impressive than the green is the view: a bright sky, emerald sea, and an exotic frame of swaying palm trees.

Island Sightseeing

From Port Denarau, you can book an assortment of island day cruises.

Treasure Island is a popular choice for its superb marine reserve and Whale's Tale Day Cruise. Swim and snorkel in turquoise waters and enjoy a barbecue lunch on the beach.

Hotel Resorts

World-class gastronomic fare can be found across all nine of Denarau's high-end resorts, offering everything from deli-style cafés to open-air cocktail lounges and restaurants serving a range of cuisines, from Asian-influenced dishes to gourmet haute cuisine.

CORAL COAST

chrisczy/Shutterstock.com

Stretching between Nadi and Suva, Fiji's Coral Coast is an 80-kilometre expanse of beaches and bays dotted along the Ocean Road. Fringing the South Pacific Ocean on the southwestern side of Viti Levu Island, the region offers impeccable views. The long stretches of exposed reef and wide banks of coral are breathtaking in their own right.

With various resorts all offering swimming pools, a variety of dining establishments and a plethora of activities to keep visitors of every age entertained, it's a fantastic base for exploring Fiji's treasures.

Kila World

Kila World is one of the most exciting tourist attractions in Fiji. With 10 kilometres of jungle paths, waterfalls, and plenty of thrilling activities, boredom is not an option at this park. For those seeking an adrenaline-pumping experience, there's the giant swing, where you step off a 12-metre-high platform, or you can try the exhilarating zip-lining.

Sigatoka Sand Dunes National Park

Described as one of Fiji's most unique wonders, the Sigatoka Sand Dunes has been created through the workings of wind, water and vegetation. In 1989, the Sigatoka Sand Dunes was established as Fiji's first National Park and has become a Fijian heritage today, rich in both natural and cultural attributes. The Park is a unique Dune forest which is home to a myriad of wildlife. Animals such as Fijian Swallowtail Butterfly, the fruit bats, the Goshawks, the giant stick insects and the cryptic Pacific Boa live here.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Jacob Lund/Shutterstock.com

Fiji's nightlife is a blend of lively city bars, serene beach parties, and cultural experiences. In Suva and Nadi, the nights come alive with a mix of international hits and local Fijian tunes, offering a range of venues from laid-back spots to glamorous nightclubs. Monthly full moon parties, reminiscent of those in Thailand, are a highlight, featuring music, dancing and traditional Kava-drinking rituals that foster a sense of community. For a different vibe, Fiji's night markets offer a taste of local culture with traditional dishes, handmade crafts, and live entertainment.

For those staying at resorts outside major cities, romantic options abound: from sunset cruises around Nadi's coastline to intimate dinners on the beach, offering fresh seafood and gourmet cuisine. Night diving and snorkelling tours reveal Fiji's marine life after dark, while cultural performances showcase the island's rich heritage through music and dance. Fiji's nightlife caters to all preferences, blending tradition with modern entertainment.

SHOPPING

gpointstudio/Shutterstock.com

Fiji is truly a shopper's delight, offering everything from brand-name items to unique and exceptional native handcrafts. The country is dotted with various villages and marketplaces where you can explore and find one-of-a-kind treasures. A great place to begin your shopping adventure is in the main cities. Nadi, for example, is one of the most popular shopping destinations in Fiji, known for its fantastic bargains and duty-free items. Suva, the capital, and Lautoka, the second-largest city, also offer excellent shopping opportunities, with a mix of traditional Fijian crafts and modern goods.

If you like to shop clothes, check out the incredible fabrics and the lovely silks. Why not buy something that will remind you of your time in Fiji? A Sulu, for example, is a traditional Fijian sarong or dress.

TOURIST INFORMATION

GNT studio/Shutterstock.com

Passport / Visa

Tourists from over a 100 countries can enter Fiji for up to four months visa free. This applies for citizens of the European Union, United States, Japan, Australia, countries of Latin America and many others.

Nationals from countries excluded from the list will have to apply for visas through Fijian diplomatic missions or online, prior to arrival. More information can be found on the website of the Department of Immigration.

Best Time to Visit

The best time to visit Fiji is from late October to early November, when the weather is dry, warm and settled. The beaches and resorts are far less crowded as school is still in at this time of year and the cost of getting and staying here has not yet reached its peak.

Public Transport

Getting around Fiji is cheap and easy thanks to the good network of buses, "carriers" (small trucks) and ferries. Local buses give you the opportunity to mingle with the people of Fiji, who by choice and tradition, treat strangers with gracious hospitality. Every town and village has its own bus stop since the bus is the most common form of public transportation. You can also hail any public bus from the roadside just by waving to the driver.

Only the West Bus company (small yellow bus) is allowed to drive into Denarau Island resort. Running every fifteen minutes, the drop-off is right in the middle of the Port Denarau shops.

To travel between Fiji's islands, options include ferries, cargo boats, boat taxis, and planes. Sea travel is more affordable, with daily ferries running between Port Denarau on Viti Levu and the Mamanuca Islands. Island resorts often organise boat transfers for their guests.
