THE CITY

Joakim Höggren / Luleå Turistcenter & Visit Luleå

Luleå was founded in 1621 by King Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden as part of efforts to establish trade and commerce in the northern regions. Luleå's strategic location along the Gulf of Bothnia and the Lule River made it an important hub for trade and transportation.

Over the years, Luleå evolved into a significant industrial centre, with industries like iron and steel production playing a crucial role in its development. The city's growth was further fueled by the expansion of the mining industry in the surrounding areas.

Luleå faced challenges during the 18th century, including fires and conflicts, but it continued to flourish. In the 19th and 20th centuries, the city experienced significant modernisation and urbanisation, becoming a prominent centre for technology and education.

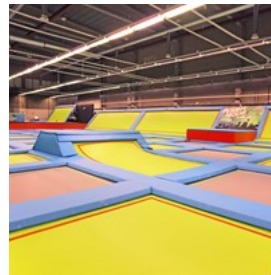

Today, Luleå is known for its blend of modern amenities and natural beauty. It has become a hub for technology, research, and education, with a thriving cultural scene and a strong emphasis on sustainability. The city's history is reflected in its architecture, museums, and the unique cultural heritage of the northern region of Sweden.

Luleå Cathedral

The Luleå cathedral was built after the great fire in Luleå in 1887. The fire completely destroyed the old church on the site, Gustaf's church, which was from the late 1700s.

Designed by architect Adolf Emil Melander in a neo-Gothic style, the new cathedral was initially named Oscar Fredrik's church upon its 1893 opening, in honour of King Oscar II. Spanning 54 metres in length and 35 metres in width, the cross-shaped cathedral features a towering spire exceeding 60 metres in height. Architect Knut Nordenskjöld led a redesign that veered towards modernity, stripping away wall paintings and star decorations, leaving a pristine white interior. Despite these changes, echoes of the original style linger in the church entrances, creating a harmonious blend of historical and contemporary aesthetics.

Hiking in Luleå

Luleå has a wide range of hiking trails, each with its unique character and showcasing distinctive parts of Luleå's natural environment. Several of them are within walking distance of the city centre, others are easily reached by bus or bicycle. If you have access to a car, then the possibilities are endless.

Hiking in Luleå is almost like strolling through the history of this unique city. For instance, you can begin by hiking across the large shingle fields on Bålingeberget — the first spot to rise from the sea, following land uplift after the recession of the inland ice sheet. At the time, Bålingeberget was just an islet in the middle of the sea and the waves shaped the rocks that now make hiking on the mountain a fascinating experience.

Continue through the history of Luleå by visiting the place we now call Gammelstad Church Town, a UNESCO World Heritage Site and once the centre of Luleå, before the city was moved in the 17th century. Today, it is a popular tourist destination and there are also many rare birds in the area. Here, you can hike on what was once the seabed, now a beautiful forest with pleasant walking paths.

When you have made your way to the modern city of Luleå, on the peninsula by the coast, you'll find many other amazing areas to explore on foot. When people moved here in the 1600s, they also began exploring the surroundings. This helped create several excellent hiking trails near the city centre, such as one of the locals' favourites, the trail around Hertsöträsk.

You can pick up a copy of Luleå's hiking guide at the Luleå tourist centre in Kulturens Hus.
