THE CITY

Sean Pavone / Shutterstock.com

Myrtle Beach's economy is built almost entirely on tourism, which brings around 17 million visitors to the area each year, in addition to billions of dollars. With a subtropical climate and average highs in the mid-80s to low-90s (°F), who wouldn't want to spend the day in the sun?

Myrtle Beach, incorporated in 1957, anchors a sprawling coastal region that encompasses several towns and beaches along South Carolina's Grand Strand. This 60-mile stretch of coastline includes North Myrtle Beach, Atlantic Beach, Surfside Beach, Garden City Beach, Murrells Inlet, Litchfield Beach, Pawleys Island, Little River, Loris, Aynor, and Conway, each contributing to the diverse attractions and experiences that define the Myrtle Beach area. From bustling boardwalks and vibrant nightlife to serene natural landscapes and charming coastal towns, the Grand Strand offers something for everyone.

The history of Myrtle Beach extends back to a time when the Waccamaw Indians inhabited the area, though little is known about their lives before European settlement. Following colonization, the region remained sparsely populated until the turn of the 20th century, when tourism began to emerge. In 1901, the Burroughs & Collins Company opened the Seaside Inn, the first hotel in the community then known as "New Town." The name "Myrtle Beach" was later bestowed upon the town by Mrs. Burroughs, the founder's wife, in honor of the abundant Southern Wax Myrtle shrubs found in the area.

Myrtle Beach has evolved into a world-renowned vacation destination, offering a diverse array of attractions and activities beyond its beautiful beaches. Explore the iconic Myrtle Beach Boardwalk, experience the thrills of Myrtle Waves Water Park and Family Kingdom Amusement Park, or enjoy a captivating performance at The Carolina Opry Theater. The Myrtle Beach Convention Center hosts numerous events throughout the year, providing entertainment for all interests. With over 1,900 restaurants, approximately 460 hotels, and 100 golf courses, Myrtle Beach has earned the title of "Golf Capital of the World" by some, offering a comprehensive vacation experience for every visitor.

DO & SEE

Post

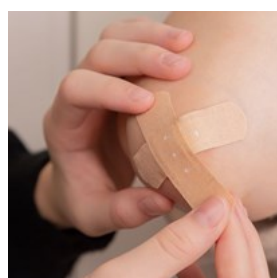

Sending parcels and letters in the US is a relatively straightforward process. The most common method is through the United States Postal Service (USPS). The USPS offers a variety of services for sending mail, including First-Class Mail for letters and postcards, Priority Mail for packages, and Priority Mail Express for overnight delivery. To send a parcel or letter, you will need to take it to a USPS post office or use a USPS blue collection box. Use the USPS website to find the nearest post office or collection box to your location. Additionally, you can also use private couriers such as FedEx and

UPS, which often provide a wider range of services and faster delivery times, but generally at a higher cost.
