THE CITY

Harry Beugelink/Shutterstock.com

Payson, established as a town in 1884, was named after Senator Levi Joseph Payson, who helped establish the first post office. Shortly after, the town held its first rodeo, now recognized as the "world's oldest continuous" rodeo and held annually ever since.

Payson's 5,000-foot elevation creates a mild climate, ideal for year-round outdoor activities. Winter snow brings opportunities for cross-country skiing and snowboarding, while warm springs, summers, and falls invite swimming, fishing, hiking, camping, and hunting. Explore the Tonto National Forest, home to the world's largest ponderosa pine stands, and discover nearby rim lakes and trout-filled streams.

DO & SEE

Billie Hanson/shutterstock

Much like its neighbor in Cave Creek, the Payson area is rife with natural rock and water formations. This gives way to a splendid exploration of Payson's trails and lakes. There are also educational opportunities for the whole family.

Mogollon Rim

Formed 600 million years ago, the Mogollon Rim is the stupendous center of Arizona's geography.

Almost incongruously to the rest of Arizona, the Rim is blanketed in forests and grass. Such lush, fertile land has led to an amazing diversity of fauna: birds (including eagles), Rocky Mountain elk, mule, and whitetail deer, black bears, mountain lions, bobcats, foxes, javelina, and coyotes all make the Mogollon Rim their home. So drive, hike, or bike to the top of the Rim and experience Arizona at its finest.

Rim Country Museum & Zane Grey Cabin

Without the novels of Zane Grey, it is quite possible that Hollywood greats like John Wayne, Shirley Temple, and Randolph Scott would have been lost on the world. Grey's outstanding Westerns became movies that launched the careers of cinema mainstays, and his novels have been published in over 20 languages, with estimated annual sales between 500,000 and one million copies worldwide. Now his cabin stands as a historical site for visitors. While not everything in the cabin is original, certain pieces allow visitors to visualize Grey's life in the early 20th century. Find cowboy boots, Grey's original saddle, a writer's chair, a cot, and a bear rug.

Tonto Natural Bridge

Appearing like a scene from an "Indiana Jones" film, the Tonto Natural Bridge is within a small valley of forest and pine trees. Estimated to be the largest natural travertine bridge in the world, the bridge is 183 feet high and covers 400 feet (150 feet at its widest point). Visitors and adventurers may choose to stand at its top or hike down to the valley.

Tonto Creek Fish Hatchery

Whether enjoying the winter snow or the summer sunshine, the Tonto Creek Fish Hatchery is bursting at the seams for opportunities to hike, picnic, and observe wildlife. This is a great educational experience for the whole family, as guides at the Hatchery teach about fish production and facts about the wetlands. There are rainbow, brook, cutthroat, and Apache trout produced each year, some catchable. The streams and wetlands on Tonto Creek are vital to the survival of Arizona's wildlife, so come and see why.

Fossil Hunting at Paleo Site

Visitors and locals can feel like Paleontologists at the Naco Paleo Site. Invertebrate fossils remain from the days in which Arizona lay beneath shallow seas some 40-50 feet deep—300 million years ago. Find fossils of the ancestors of modern-day fish, reptiles, and insects.

More Info: The Paleo Site is marked by a sign, approximately 12-13 miles east of Payson, just before the Kohl's Ranch Turnoff.

Shoofly Village Ruins

Take a self-guided tour into Arizona's rich Native past. As the epicenter of Southwestern prehistoric cultures, the overall Rim Country served as home to probably 1,000 different sites. The Shoofly ruins themselves were occupied between 1000 and 1250 A.D. There were once 79 structures with a large building at its center that housed 26 rooms averaging 37.4 sq. meters each. Visiting the Ruins brings with it a newfound appreciation for Arizona's telling history.

Post

Sending parcels and letters in the US is a relatively straightforward process. The most common method is through the United States

Postal Service (USPS). The USPS offers a variety of services for sending mail, including First-Class Mail for letters and postcards, Priority Mail for packages, and Priority Mail Express for overnight delivery. To send a parcel or letter, you will need to take it to a USPS post office or use a USPS blue collection box. Use the USPS website to find the nearest post office or collection box to your location. Additionally, you can also use private couriers such as FedEx and UPS, which often provide a wider range of services and faster delivery times, but generally at a higher cost.
