Mexicarte (Tulum)

Mexicarte, with locations in both Akumal and Tulum, is a vibrant destination for unique Mexican arts and crafts. In Tulum, you'll find two distinct shops: one centrally located and another, specialising in textiles and clothing, about 35 minutes south of the city. Both locations offer an eclectic mix of pottery, sculpture, housewares, jewellery, and colourful Mexican skulls.

While the prices are a bit on the higher side, the unique and high-quality gifts make Mexicarte a must-visit for those seeking to take home a piece of authentic Mexican artistry.

Best Time to Visit

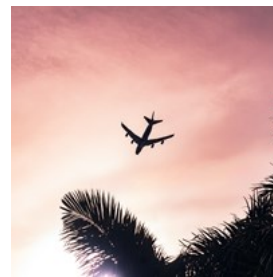

The best time to visit the Riviera Maya is between November and April when the weather is warm and dry, ideal for exploring the region's stunning beaches, ancient ruins, and vibrant marine life. During these months, you'll find pleasant temperatures, low humidity, and minimal rainfall, perfect for outdoor activities and sightseeing.

Accommodation prices are generally higher during the peak winter season, especially around the holidays, but the trade-off is a lively atmosphere and a wealth of events and festivals.

Cancún Airport International (CUN)

The main airport serving the Riviera Maya is Cancun International Airport (CUN). It is located about 30 minutes from Playa del Carmen and roughly an hour from Tulum. From the Cancun International Airport, there are several transportation options to reach Playa del Carmen and Tulum.

For Playa del Carmen, you can choose from shared shuttles, which are economical and convenient or private shuttles for a more direct and comfortable journey. You can book these in advance through various travel companies or directly at the airport.

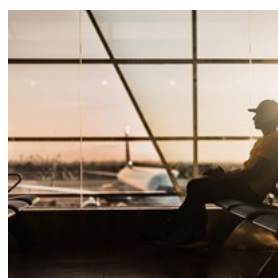

The company ADO operates a direct bus service from the airport to Playa del Carmen. The buses are frequent and offer a reliable option. Taxis are readily available at the airport but pricier. Other options include renting a car or ride-sharing services like Uber, though their availability can vary.

For Tulum, shared shuttles are also available and can be booked in advance, though they may take longer due to multiple stops. Private shuttles offer a more direct route and can be booked ahead of time. ADO provides a cost-effective bus service, although you'll need to transfer from the airport to their terminal in Cancun. Taxis to Tulum are also costly. Ride-sharing services like Uber may be an option, though they can be unreliable.

Cozumel International Airport (CZM)

The island of Cozumel is served by Cozumel International Airport, which handles both international and domestic flights.

Travellers can reach the city centre by taxis and shuttle vans, both private and shared, as well as private minibuses, which have a capacity of 4-10 passengers.

Car rental companies are also present at the airport for those who prefer to drive.

When hailing a taxi, ensure you have Mexican pesos or US dollars, as many taxi drivers do not accept credit cards.

Tourist Tax

The state of Quintana Roo, where the Riviera Maya is located, introduced a visitor tax called the 'Visitax' in April 2021. The tax applies to all international tourists over the age of 4 entering the state. At the time of writing, the tax is approximately 224 Mexican pesos (around $10-11 USD), although this amount can vary slightly due to exchange rates.

Tourists are required to pay this tax online before their departure from Mexico, and proof of payment must be shown at the airport. The payment can be made through the official Visitax website.

Passport/Visa

Citizens from the United States, Canada, the United Kingdom, and most European Union countries can enter Mexico without a visa.

Other nations that also enjoy visa-free access are visitors from Japan, Australia, and New Zealand.

However, nationals from some countries do need a visa to visit Mexico. Notable examples include citizens from India, China, Russia, South Africa, and the Philippines.

With such a diverse range of entry policies, it's always advisable for travellers to check the latest requirements with their local Mexican embassy or consulate before planning their trip.

Taxi

In the Riviera Maya, taxis are available 24 hours a day and offer a convenient way to navigate the region. While taxis are relatively easy to find, especially around popular tourist spots, they can be a bit pricey compared to local transport options.

Unfortunately, ride-sharing apps like Uber do not operate extensively in this region, so it's advisable to agree on a fare before starting your journey to avoid any surprises. Make sure to carry small bills or the correct amount as change is difficult sometimes.

Public Transport

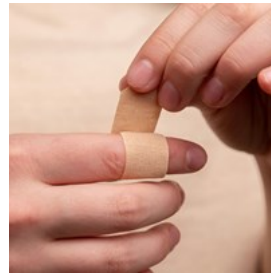

There are a couple of ways to travel around the Riviera Maya: Colectivos: these shared minivans, known as 'colectivos', are a popular choice for shorter trips along the main highway between Cancún and Tulum. They run all day and can be flagged down at the side of Highway 307. There is no fixed timetable, so patience is a virtue. In Playa del Carmen, you can catch them at the colectivo stand located at 2nd Street between 15th and 20th Avenue. Do be aware that these vans can be quite full during rush hours, making it a bit challenging to find a spot.

For longer journeys, the ADO bus company offers a reliable and comfortable service connecting major destinations like Cancún, Playa del Carmen, and Tulum. These buses are popular among tourists for their convenience and affordability.
