A trip to New York City is the perfect occasion to visit Syracuse, the fifth most populous city in the state of New York and the county seat of Onondaga County. First inhabited by Iroquois Indians, Syracuse's area has experienced intense waves of migration since the mid 1600s, which has shaped the city into a melting-pot of different communities and one of the most important centers for commercial salt production. Today, it's a vibrant and cosmopolitan city with a wealth of cultural activities and world-class events.

THE CITY

debra millet/Shutterstock.com

Over the past 200 years, Syracuse has been many things: the nation's top producer of salt, a thriving industrial city, and a major academic and cultural center. One thing it has never been is dull.

Salt production began in the late 1700s and increased drastically with the opening of the Erie Canal in 1825. It waned around the end of the American Civil War and gave way to industrial manufacturing. Syracuse is still known as the 'Salt City' for providing most of the salt used in the United States in the 1800s.

Central New York's Native American heritage is evidenced by the names of its towns. Additionally, Syracuse has attracted immigrants from all over the world, and the tableau of the city is painted with the rich culture of these people that can be seen with a stroll through one of the city's many villages, such as Little Italy or Tipperary Hill. Although history and tradition are important to Syracusans, this is not a city that lives in its past. It has grown into a vibrant academic and cultural center with the continued growth of Syracuse University, a major research university with nationally recognized athletic programs, and Upstate Medical University. Work from local artists is celebrated and can be found in the city's many art galleries as well as in some local shops.

Parents and their children can find exciting activities at the Everson Museum of Art, Rosamond Gifford Zoo, The MOST (Milton J. Rubenstein Museum of Science and Technology), and Erie Canal Museum, along with the Landmark Theater, Syracuse Stage, and Armory Square with its many fine restaurants, taverns, and nightclubs.

DO & SEE

debra millet/Shutterstock.com

Syracuse is a town full of history and beauty. Visit one of Syracuse's many museums or historic districts to learn more about the city. For a relaxing day, there are several things to do at one of the area's more than 50 states, county and city parks.

NBT Bank Stadium

If you are looking for the home of the Syracuse Chiefs, you have just found it. The NBT Bank Stadium, with 11,117 seats, offers tickets on an affordable price for all the fans. Not only will you be able to see the games, but also shop in the merchandize stores in the stadium as well.

WonderWorks

WonderWorks is an amusement park for the mind, combining education and entertainment with more than 100 hands-on exhibits that will spark the imagination and challenge the mind. Visitors to the attraction will experience 84 mph hurricane-force winds, land the space shuttle, pedal the Xtreme 360 bikes, become a human lightning rod by touching 100,000 volts of electricity, lie on a bed of 3,500 nails, design and ride a virtual roller coaster, play virtual sports, climb the indoor ropes course, compete in a game of laser tag and much more.

For those that are seeking a thrilling adventure, WonderWorks offers the Canyon Climb ropes course. It's the World's largest suspended indoor ropes course. Standing 70 feet tall, visitors will explore 3 levels of ropes as they encounter over 81 different obstacles and activities; including swinging steps, lily pads, a tremor bridge and more.

DINING

Rachel Bramlett/unsplash

Two words sum up the philosophy of most food in Syracuse; fresh and local. Although there are several pubs located in Syracuse, you will find more than just typical bar fare here. Each restaurant adds its own flair to its cuisine, and because of the city's rich cultural diversity, there is also a variety of authentic world cuisine available.

Dinosaur Bar-B-Que

What began as a mobile concession stand has become a standard for barbeque in the Northeast U.S. Dinosaur Bar-B-Que opened its flagship location in Downtown Syracuse in 1988 and has since expanded operations to other cities in New York as well as New Jersey and Connecticut. Dinosaur has been featured on Travel Channel and Food Network shows for its signature sauces served with pulled pork, ribs and brisket, as well as dishes like Creole-spiced deviled eggs and fried green tomatoes. They even have a gluten-free menu.

Best Time to Visit

As with the rest of New York State, temperatures in Syracuse may vary drastically throughout the year. The warmest period to visit Syracuse stretches from June to August, though the high humidity, around 50% on average, could bring about rain already during the last days of July. Winters can be cold, so a trip is better left for late Spring, approximately from April to May, this season offers tourists open air attractions, such as artists performing in the streets, and the beauty of many flowering trees in the numerous parks and along the avenues of the city center.
