Sun-drenched and palm-fringed, the island of Saint Martin is one of the most beautiful in the eastern Caribbean. It also has a dual personality: the northern Saint-Martin is a little outpost of France, and the southern Sint Maarten oozes the warmth of the Dutch. The border between them is basically non-existent, and visitors are free to enjoy everything from water sports and cultural festivals to shopping.

THE ISLAND

Steve Heap/Shutterstock.com

Hundreds of islands form the Caribbean, but none are quite so enigmatic as St Martin. The island is one of the smallest to ever be divided, with residents of both the French and Dutch sides working together in mutual friendship and respect.

Of course, the island had human inhabitants long before the European colonisers arrived in 1493. Ancient relics date the island's first settlers, probably Ciboney Indians (Arawaks), back to 3,500 years ago. The locals were joined by migrants from South America's Orinoco basin around 800 A.D. Because of St Martin's salt pans, they called the island "Soualiga," or "Land of Salt". Mainly a farming and fishing society, the locals lived in villages of straw-roofed buildings which were strong enough to resist hurricanes. They were a tranquil people, who valued artistic and spiritual pursuits.

Their lives were turned upside-down, however, with the arrival of the Carib Indians. A warrior nation, the Caribs killed the Arawak men and enslaved the women. When Europeans began to explore the Caribbean, Carib society had almost completely displaced the Arawaks.

In the era of the European colonisation, St Martin was a coveted piece of land. The French wanted to have an island between Trinidad and Bermuda, while the Dutch found San Martín a convenient halfway point between their colonies in New Amsterdam (present day New York) and Brazil. The Spanish captured the island during the Eighty Years' War only to abandon it in 1648, allowing its former colonial masters to reestablish their control.

Today, the island is divided roughly 60:40 between the French Republic and the Kingdom of the Netherlands, with the Dutch part being more populated than the French part. The division dates to 1648.

Culturally, Saint-Martin and Sint Maarten are quite different. Saint-Martin has some of the most chic fashion shops and restaurants in the Caribbean and beaches elegant enough to rival those in Cannes and Saint-Tropez, while Sint Maarten shares the serious pragmatism of its fellow continental countrymen.

For the visitor, this means there's lots to do. Dine out on French à la carte cuisine and wines one day and sample fresh pastries inspired by the finest Dutch chefs the next. Enjoy activities like horseback riding and water sports and exploring breathtaking beaches and scenery are other options to fill your day.

DO & SEE

Earthscape/Shutterstock.com

St Martin has a rich and interesting history, which can be seen today in its unique cultural heritage. Visit the Sint Maarten Museum and some of the many historical sites to learn more about the island's history and its impact on modern life. However, do not forget to take some time to relax while you enjoy the unspoiled beauty of the island's many beaches.

Fort St Louis

Fort St Louis is the largest historical monument in Saint-Martin. It is named after King Louis XVI of France, who built a settlement to protect Marigot during his reign. Take a pleasant hike up the hill and catch the view of the town at sunset or sunrise.

Saint Martin Carnival

Saint Martin Carnival is one of the island's cultural highlights, where locals and tourists get together in the streets to sing, dance, make music, throw confetti and have a good time watching the lively parade. Both Marigot and Philipsburg are decorated in colourful feathers and glitter for the whole carnival month.

On the French side, the carnival takes place in February and until early March. On the Dutch side, the carnival is celebrated from mid-April until early May.

Border Obelisk

The only place in the world where you can directly cross the border between Holland and France! Back in 1648, the French and Dutch signed a contract dividing the island into two parts. Since then, the two sides have lived in peace and harmony. Apart from the language, the only indicator of the border is a border obelisk marking 300 years of peaceful coexistence by the two nations.

BEACH LIFE

jessicakirsh/Shutterstock.com

From lengthy spans of sand hugged by palm trees to secluded coves and sunbather-attracting dunes, St Martin's 37 beaches are a haven of white sands and inviting shores. The grandest of these beaches can be found on the French side, with many embracing a naturist ethos. In contrast, Sint Maarten boasts a multitude of picturesque coves, each more charming than the last.

Maho Beach

Along the coast from Fort Amsterdam in Sint Maarten, Maho Beach is surrounded by rocks, which makes it a fun location for exploring, hiking, and snorkelling. The beach is very close to the Princess Juliana International Airport and a popular site for plane spotters, so come here and be dazzled by the KLM Boeing 747 landing right overhead.

Baie Rouge

Located in a residential area away from the commercial hotels, Baie Rouge, or "Red Bay", owes its name to the slightly reddish colour of its sand. This beach features some stunning multicoloured rocks and cliffs, and the crystal-clear water makes it a favourite among snorkellers.

Address: Baie Rouge, Saint-Martin

Cupecoy Bay

The shaded caves and the low, scenic sandstone cliffs that rise up behind the beach have charmed tourists and visitors since forever. This secluded spot hardly gets crowded, so don't miss the chance to relax and unwind in solitude.

Address: Cupecoy Bay, Sint Maarten

Guana Bay Beach

Located on the Atlantic side of the island, with huge waves lapping onto the shore, Guana Bay is a favourite spot for surfers. Although close to Philipsburg, this expansive, sunny beach is usually relatively quiet.

DINING

Igor Dutina/Shutterstock.com

Visitors to Saint-Martin and Sint Maarten will be spoiled with all of their choices when it comes to dining out. For lovers of French cuisine, there is probably nowhere else in the Caribbean where you can dine on à la carte and French-inspired gourmet food at such reasonably inexpensive prices. The food is usually al fresco or located on the beach, with fine wine lists to accompany the meal.

Seek out the wonderfully aromatic Creole and Caribbean cuisine, or taste some other popular cooking styles, such as Mexican, Indonesian, and Italian. Most restaurants have a varied menu of meat, fresh fish, and shellfish dishes, while beach bars with non-stop barbecues offer spicy chicken and fish dishes cooked with traditional Caribbean recipes.

Izi Restaurant

Decorated in a style reminiscent of Italian architecture and decor, this restaurant serves fine Italian cuisine, including authentic pasta dishes with sauces. All dishes are prepared and cooked using ingredients imported from Italy.

SHOPPING

Evangeline Addison/Shutterstock.com

The island of St Martin is a shopper's duty-free paradise, especially for high couture fashion from French and Italian houses, jewellery, leather goods, fragrances from the world's top perfume companies, fine porcelain, crystal and handcrafts.

Passengers from ships touring the Caribbean are drawn to the shops around Front Street in Philipsburg. On the other side of the island, Marigot gathers numerous chic shops and boutiques, and the waterfront West Indies shopping mall proves a temptation for shoppers. If you are looking for local handicrafts and produce, then head to the Marigot Market, where you can purchase tropical fruits, spices, freshly caught fish and unique souvenirs to bring home.

Ma Doudou

The island paradise of St. Martin has become synonymous with the good life. Remember the time you spent soaking in the sun with a drink in hand with a bottle of rum in a number of flavours. All rums are made by local craftsmen using traditional methods.

TOURIST INFORMATION

bellajay/Shutterstock.com

Princess Juliana International Airport (SXM)

Saint-Martin and Sint Maarten are served by the Princess Juliana International Airport (SXM), which is located 15 km west of Philipsburg and near Simpson Bay, on the Dutch side of the island. The Grand Case Airport, in the north of the island, is used only for regional flights.

Taxi services are provided outside both airports. There are also rental cars available, and some hotels will arrange transfers.

You have undoubtedly seen photos and videos of planes landing right by the beach. Most of those were taken on Maho Beach — arguably one of the most spectacular places in the world for a plane-spotting. The beach is just west of Princess Juliana Airport.

Passport / Visa

Most travellers enter St Martin on the Dutch side of the island. Upon arrival at Princess Juliana International Airport, all passengers must present:

- a passport valid at least until the end of your stay;
- a completed and signed Embarkation and Disembarkation card (ED-card);
- a return or onward ticket;
- a reservation for an accommodation in Sint Maarten;
- proof of sufficient financial means.

Visitors and goods can travel freely between the French and Dutch sides of the island.

The maximum stay allowed on St Martin is 30 days uninterrupted for tourists in general. For Dutch and American passport holders, maximum stay is 6 months uninterrupted with the possibility to extend. Nationals of Canada, the European Union, Australia, New Zealand and Japan can stay for 3 months uninterrupted with the possibility to extend.

Best Time to Visit

The best time to visit St Martin is between May and June or November and mid December: torrential rains are not frequent in these weeks and airfare and room prices lower consistently.

The weather on the island is generally pleasant throughout the year, but bear in mind that the rainy season starts in June and protracts until the end of October.

Try to avoid the period between winter and spring, which is peak season in St Martin. The island gets very crowded and prices rise dramatically.

Public Transport

Hiring a car is the best way to get around.

Motorcycles and mopeds are also available for hire, or you can just hop on a jitney — the usual mode of transport for islanders, which is an inexpensive way to explore the island. Group taxis (minibuses) cover most areas of the island, however, there is no strict schedule.

Taxi

Taxis can be hired at Princess Juliana International Airport and at all major hotels. They aren't metered, but drivers must follow official rates for travel throughout the island.

Currency

The official currency of the French side of the island, Saint-Martin, is the Euro, while the Dutch side, Sint Maarten, uses the Netherlands Antillean guilder, pegged at 1.79 per US dollar.

The Netherlands Antillean guilder will be replaced by the Caribbean guilder. The switch was initially scheduled for 2021, but has been delayed several times.

The US Dollar is also accepted everywhere on the island. However, make sure you are getting a fair exchange rate.

Opening hours

Shops are generally open 8:30am-5pm with a lunch break of around two hours. Banks are generally open on the French side from Monday to Friday 8:30am-1:30pm and on the Dutch side from Monday to Friday 8:30am-3:30pm. Some banks are open on Saturday 8:30am-noon.
