THE CITY

City of Szczecin

"Echte Stettiner" (True Szczeciner) - this was the way to describe someone stubborn, resolute, courageous, raw - in XIX-th century. Genius loci of Szczecin is felt here easily: in the communist era Szczecin was the city, where strikes broke out, where people put up a continuous resistance to the communist regime. Today, Szczecin is also full people with a firm, but at the same time welcoming character.

Szczecin was the capital of the Duchy of Pomerania, but also had been ruled by Denmark, Prussia, France, Sweden, Germany. Today it's inside the Polish borders. This extraordinary past can be seen today on every step: in architecture, urban planning, squares, parks; while walking you pass the still operating water pumps, shelters, old signs.

During the Second World War, Szczecin was destroyed in 80%, so - in contrast to most of the cities - we don't have the Old Town. Currently, it is being re-built.

Even visiting pubs and discos brings you a trip in time: in one of the pubs you can move to the seventeenth century, to the time of the Swedish Szczecin (it is opened in the former city fortifications); in another - to the Communist times (when there was a militia station). One of nightclubs is located in the former headquarters of the Royal Iron Railway.

The past is everywhere here and it is always clearly visible - while walking in Poland's largest cemetery, which is both a park and botanical garden; the largest shelter in today's Poland, during the session in the oldest cinema in the world... Szczecin is also the history of technology: the wreck of the tanker made of concrete, Poland's only one railway drawbridge or the oldest floating dock in Europe.

At the same time Szczecin is not afraid of momentum and bold architecture. Two buildings that have won the highest architectural awards make this city even more worth visiting: Szczecin Philharmonic, that gained the Mies van der Rohe award and the Centre for Dialogue Upheavals with the World Building of the Year award that was won during the festival of architecture in Berlin in November 2016.

How much time is needed to see Szczecin?

Someone may say that the one-day intensive tour will do the trick. But this is not true, because Szczecin is not only about the past. Szczecin is also the vastness of space, water and greenery, which is best viewed from boat or kayak. Szczecin is a Floating Garden - many rare species of aquatic plants and animals have here their home.

Szczecin has many faces. How much time is needed to see and get to know them all?

Golden Trail

There is no such a walking trail in any other Polish city. It leads from the city center from The Pomeranian Dukes' Castle through John Paul II Alley, Kasprowicza Park to the forest. Although it is a long way to go it is worth traveling as a whole by for example combining the walk with the bike tour.

After visiting the antique part of the city, you can ride a bike through Jasne Błonia Alleys, Kasprowicza Park with its charming Rusalka Lake and Summer Theater to the Rose Garden.

Next, following the forest pathways you can reach some city recreational facilities. You can take a rest in the city lido or on a landscaped forest fields. On Głębokie Lake you can change your bike for a kayak or water bicycle. Rope Park waits for amateurs of active relaxation.

Your trip can be continued through the forest for example following the trail of Seven Mills -Gubałówka.

City of Szczecin

Szczecin is a city with lots of stunning places. Some are famous for their history or architecture; some of them are hard to find and you really need a good guide to show you them. And some are to find here!

Chrobry Embankment (Haken's Terrace)

The Chrobry Embankment, formerly Haken's Terrace, one of the most beautiful places in Europe. From here you can watch the vast panorama of the Odra River and the harbour. The viewing terraces are 500 m long and are located 19 m above the Odra river bank.

The earliest written history of the area dates back to the sixteenth century. In 1873, a demolition of the eighteenth-century fortifications of Szczecin began. Thanks to the great commitment of Hermann Haken, High Mayor of Szczecin, in the years 1902-1905 a viewing terrace was formed on the site of Fort Leopold. Wide staircases run on both sides from the terrace to the banks of the river, where two pavilions were erected as the entrance to the restaurant, created temporarily in the remains of the fortifications. At the bottom, there is a fountain decorated with figures of John of Kolno and Wyszak and two tall columns stylized as lighthouses.

In the years 1906 to 1912 in the northern part of the terrace an architectural complex was built for the then regency of Szczecin, where now the authorities of the West-Pomeranian province have their headquarters. In addition, in the southern part of the Embankment a building complex of the Maritime Academy is located (from the years 1902-1905 and 1918-1921) and, housed in the same building, Contemporary Theatre and the Maritime Branch of the National Museum. Moreover, a large park is situated near the Chrobry Embankment.

Szczecin Philharmonic

Have you ever seen an iceberg in the city center? If not, you must see the new premises of Szczecin Philharmonic which majestically emerges from urban buildings and pervasive greenery.

Its metal and glass facade supplemented with light illuminations catch the eye of each person who comes nearby. The building was designed by catalonian architects from Barozzi Veiga from Barcelona and immediately has become the icon of our city. Modern design combined with inspiration taken from historic building of Konzerthaus creates a coherent whole of past, present and future of Szczecin. It has received numerous awards, including the Mies van der Rohe Award in 2015, the Award of the President of the Republic of Poland for the Best Architectural Structure in Poland in the years 2013-2014 in the "LIFE IN ARCHITECTURE" contest, and the award of the "bryla. pl" website dealing with architecture.

During the summer there are regular guided tours. There is also a cafe on the ground floor.

Pomeranian Dukes' Castle

Anyone entering Szczecin by bridges over the Oder River can see the towering red-brick gothic Cathedral and an elegant, pale silhouette of a Renaissance castle with green towers, which used to be the seat of the dukes of the Griffins dynasty who ruled the Duchy of Pomerania.

The Pomeranian Dukes' Castle has five wings and two courtyards. Acting as a cultural institution it organizes an array of cultural events: concerts, theatre performances, exhibitions, conferences and meetings to popularize science, as well as to spread knowledge about the history of West Pomerania. The largest wing houses an Opera.

In the wing that housed a mint in the olden days one can find today Cultural and Tourist Information Centre. There is a panoramic terrace on the rooftop of the northern wing from where splendid views can be appreciated. The wing's basement houses a Vault with sarcophaguses of six princes. The Duke Boguslaw X hall, which used to be a princely chapel, is now a concert hall with a polychromatic ceiling decorated in Renaissance style. A 17th century astronomical clock is the Castle's special tourist attraction. Also a room dedicated to Eilhard Lubinus and the Witches' Cell are definitely worth a visit.

Łasztownia isle & boulevards

It is on this mystery Island that the new heart of Szczecin is being born. Today's Łasztownia is a completely different place to the closed port island from a while back. Once an isolated, mysterious space, today it is one of the favourite places for people going for walks, running, biking or fans of good coffee and international cuisine.

Gradually renovated buildings of the old butcher's complex, historic port cranes, new boulevards, cafés, restaurants, a yacht port and big events bring huge crowds to Łasztownia. It is here where you can find Euroregion Culture Center "Stara Rzeźnia", the growing Marine Science Centre, and every day the Cranosauruses perform their illuminated dance. The number of attractions creating the atmosphere of this unique place is still growing. In the future we will see more investments and projects which will eventually be the implementation of the winning concept of the international competition for the island development vision.

Walking on the Łasztownia wharfs, if you're lucky enough, you will feel the aroma of chocolate, coming from the Gryf chocolate factory. After dark you'll surely see the illumination of three historic cranes, nicknamed "Cranosauruses". Don't forget to take a picture with a marine sign "SZCZECIN", located on the square at the end of Old Town Quay. This is also the place where you can best see the Old Town panorama, with the monumental buildings of Wały Chrobrego and the Ducal Castle.

From Łasztownia, we go directly onto the neighbouring Grodzka Island, which attracts both children and adults with a beach, beach bar and events for families, kings of the dance floor and fans of open-air cinemas.

Museum of Technology and Transport

"Art Depot" in Szczecin is an old tram depot which was built in 1912 with reinforced concrete. It has a sloping roof and a front glass wall with a clock. Since 2006 it has been one of the biggest Polish museums of a technological profile. The collection of almost 100 antique vehicles that was bought from Leszek Liszewski is the most precious. There, you can find such curiosities as micro-car Smyk or the one and only SUV version of Fiat 126p called in Polish "maluch" (tiny). Moreover, there are trams, buses (that you can enter), motorcycles, bikes, non-typical vehicles, electronic, telecommunication and household equipment and many more.

Jasne Błonia and Park Kasprowicza

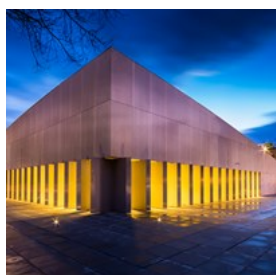

Jasne Błonia Square is a wide green house located by the Szczecin Municipal Office. It's a great place to rest: you can walk, ride a bike or sit comfortably on a bench or on the lawn. The park was built in the years 1925-27, it was designed with rows of maple plane trees on the sides of a wide lawn with ground-based flower arrangements in the middle. It is the largest concentration of this species of trees in Poland, of which over 200 are growing here. Computational continuity is ensured by an alley stretching towards Kasprowicz Park and further to the Arkonian Forest.

Try to come to the park in early spring when the lawns are carpeted with bright crocus flowers.

Dialogue Center "Upheavals"

It's one of branches of the National Museum in Szczecin, where we present the newest history of Szczecin and West Pomerania region, with particular attention given to social protests and breaking events in the years 1970-1971, 1980-1981, 1988-1989, that lead Poland to regain independence in 1989. The building that houses our museum is partially hidden under the Solidarity Square. The exhibition is interactive, apart from subject-related pieces, in its underground rooms you may see films, pictures and recordings of the events' witnesses and participants. Location of the museum has not been chosen by an accident - it was here when on 17 December 1970 first shots were fired at the protesters. In July 2016, the Dialogue Centre Upheavals was ranked the Best Public Space in Europe. Four months later, on November 18, the same building was named World Building of the Year during the Festival of Architecture in Berlin.

St. James Arch Cathedral and the tower

St. James' church in Szczecin was founded in 1187 by a wealthy townsman Jakob Beringer from Bamberg and it was constructed outside the city fortifications, on a hill, just like the Benedictine monastery church of St. Archangel Michael in Bamberg.

The building was rebuilt several times. In the 13th century, the building had the form of a three-nave Gothic basilica, without buttresses, but later the naves were raised. In 1534, the temple passed into the hands of Protestants.

Inside the cathedral there is a chancel with an altar table and decorative brass reliefs. There is also a triptych with reliefs from the 14th century and an elaborate crucifix from the turn of the 15th and 16th centuries. The cathedral has 19 chapels, including the Chapel of Our Lady of Częstochowa with a neo-Gothic interior and the image of Our Lady of Częstochowa; the Baptism Chapel with a triptych from the 16th century; and the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament with a beautiful altar from the end of the 14th century.

The organs in the cathedral are truly impressive. The first mention of the instrument comes from 1679; unfortunately, they did not survive the turbulent history of the place. In 2008, new, large organs were built. An interesting fact about the instrument is the fact that the main part of the organ, weighing about 30 tons, is suspended above the nave without any support. The counterweight is the construction located at the end of the choir. The instrument is 10 m high, has 66 voices and consists of 4743 pipes, from 11 mm to 10 m high.

In 2008 the cathedral's tower was rebuilt and its original appearance was restored. There is a viewing platform on the tower, available for tourists all year round. After the renovations, the tower is 110.18 m tall and is the second tallest building in Szczecin.

The building is currently the second tallest temple in Poland, right after the basilica in Licheń.

The temple is part of the European Route of Brick Gothic.

Baroque Royal Gate

This stylish and cultural café offers a wide selection of drinks and lunches. It is situated right by The Royal Gate that was built between 1725 and 1727. Over the entrance you can see the crest with the Prussian eagle encircled by the chains of the black eagle and the royal crown.

This is one of the two former gates to the city, which still exist today. There are (also online) numerous engravings, paintings and photographs showing the Royal Gate (Brama Królewska) in the past. Amazing monument, which together with the buildings in the area (philharmonic, Museum of Upheavals, Church of St. Peter and Paul, St. James' Cathedral ...) creates a unique atmosphere.

Now in it you can drink chocolate from polish company Wedel.

There is a panoramic terrace on the rooftop of the northern wing from where splendid views can be appreciated. The wing's basement houses a Vault with sarcophaguses of six princes. The Duke Boguslaw X hall, which used to be a princely chapel, is now a concert hall with a polychromatic ceiling decorated in Renaissance style. A 17th century astronomical clock is the Castle's special tourist attraction. Also a room dedicated to Eilhard Lubinus and the Witches' Cell are definitely worth a visit.

Łasztownia isle & boulevards

Łasztownia (ger. Lastadie) is located in the very heart of Szczecin, vis-a-vis the Chrobry Embankment. It is a river island whose history stretches back to the Middle Ages. After the Allied air raids of 1942 - 1944, most of the buildings on Łasztownia were destroyed.

Currently, Łasztownia is one of the most interesting (and most mysterious) places in Szczecin. One particularly interesting spot is the part of the Old Town Wharf situated right next to the historic cranes, affectionately dubbed the "cronosaurs". Following the renovation works, they have regained their former splendour. Symbols of the port of Szczecin, these historical cranes from 1929 are most beautiful during the night.

Museum of Technology and Transport

"Art Depot" in Szczecin is an old tram depot which was built in 1912 with reinforced concrete. It has a sloping roof and a front glass wall with a clock. Since 2006 it has been one of the biggest Polish museums of a technological profile. The collection of almost 100 antique vehicles that was bought from Leszek Liszewski is the most precious. There, you can find such curiosities as micro-car Smyk or the one and only SUV version of Fiat 126p called in Polish "maluch" (tiny). Moreover, there are trams, buses (that you can enter), motorcycles, bikes, non-typical vehicles, electronic, telecommunication and household equipment and many more.

Dialogue Center "Upheavals"

It's one of branches of the National Museum in Szczecin, where we present the newest history of Szczecin and West Pomerania region, with particular attention given to social protests and breaking events in the years 1970-1971, 1980-1981, 1988-1989, that lead

Poland to regain independence in 1989. The building that houses our museum is partially hidden under the Solidarity Plaza, adjacent to the Concert Hall. The exhibition is interactive, apart from subject-related pieces, in its underground rooms you may see films, pictures and recordings of the events' witnesses and participants. Location of the museum has not been chosen by an accident - it was here when on 17 December 1970 first shots were fired at the protesters. In July 2016, the Dialogue Centre Upheavals was ranked the Best Public Space in Europe. Four months later, on November 18, the same building was named World Building of the Year.

St. James Arch Cathedral and the tower

After the 1147 crusade against the Polabian Slavs, Szczecin became a place of German colonisation. St Jacob's Church, intended for German colonists, was consecrated in 1187. It was founded by Beringer, a Bramberg pilgrim, and given to the custody of the Benedictine brothers from the St Michael Monastery in Bramberg.

The construction of the brick church continued for dozens of years, starting in the middle of the 13th Century from a three-aisle basilica with two spires and a basilica-like presbytery, surrounded with a by-pass and a circle of chapels. The altars were founded by the Szczecin guilds and companies.

The presbytery reconstruction started in 1370. The basilica frame was changed into the hall frame with a circle of chapels between the interior buttresses.

At the outset of the 15th Century Henry Brunsberg built additional chapels on the southern aisle, decorating them with impressive ornaments made of tiled moulders.

In 1456 the southern spire collapsed during a hurricane, destroying the basilica corpus. During reconstruction, additional chapels were erected in the northern section, together with only one spire in the western part, as a result of which the corpus was changed from the basilica frame into a hall church frame. The reconstruction work was completed in 1503.

In the last 25 years of the 17th Century, the interior section was reconstructed in the Baroque style. The St Jacob bell, constructed by Wawrzyniec Köckeritz, the Szczecin bell-founder, was placed in the church tower. The altar was created by sculptor Erhard Löffler, and the painting, entitled "Taken down the cross", was made by Lengereich. The organ front was sculptured by the Amsterdam master Van der Linden. While assembling the organs with a large scale of sounds, advice was provided by master Buxtehude from Lübeck. The capacity of this instrument was wonderfully utilised by organist and composer Karl Loewe, residing in Szczecin in 1820-1866.

The church was badly damaged during the 16 August 1944 shelling. Its reconstruction did not start until 1972 and has continued until today. The official consecration of the cathedral was performed on 31 May 1982 by Kazimierz Majdański, the Szczecin-Kamieniec Bishop. The status of Cathedral Basilica was given by Pope John Paul II on 23 May 1983, and the status of Metropolitan Basilica on 25 March 1992.

Considering the ongoing additions to the rich furnishings of the church, we suggest that you buy a current version of the guidebook while visiting this astonishing place.

The tower is an element of the St. James Metropolitan Basilica Cathedral. An observation deck is available for tourist all year long. The entrance to the terrace is only via a lift.

The National Museum in Szczecin — The Szczecin History Museum -Old Town Hall

The first mention of the wooden market hall, which was also the venue for the deliberations of the court and the meetings of the city councillors called "theatrum", dates back to 1245. The current Gothic town hall hails from mid-15th Century, with Henryk Brunsberg considered to be its builder. The richly-decorated façade featuring glazed stones adds a painterly style to the structure. The building has arcades on its south wall, which used to play host to court proceedings on summer days. The City Council convened here twice a week. From the 14th Century the resolutions of the City Council were announced twice a year, i.e. on 1 May and 29 September. As some of them were quite peculiar, it is no wonder that such announcements sometimes left the city in tumult. Examples included the introduction of the anti-Hussite tax in 1428 and the raising of the prices of spirits in 1616. Less severe regulations were e.g. the resolution from 1418 against calumniators and rumourmongers slandering "lords, dukes, knights, squires, ladies, girls, priests, and vassals...", or one law from 1558 which limited the luxury and excess during wedding celebrations, baptisms, and funerals. From 5 to 13 December 1570 the town hall hosted a Peace Congress ending the Northern Seven Years' War between Sweden and Denmark.

After the damage suffered during the Brandenburg sieges, it was rebuilt in the Baroque style and served its purpose until the City Council was moved to the New Town Hall in 1879.

Reconstructed again after the War in 1975 as the National Museum, it houses exhibitions dedicated to Szczecin's past.

The National Museum in Szczecin – The Museum of Regional Traditions

The Museum of Regional Traditions is located in Baroque Landed Gentry House (Pommersche Landsmannschaft), built in years 1726-1727 according to the order of Prussian king Frederick William I. The building was designed by Gerhard Cornelius de Walrave (1692-1773), the author of, among others, famous Kłodzko fortress and fortifications of Szczecin.

The palace served as the session hall of Pomeranian provincial authorities and a royal residence during king's stays in Szczecin. Over the entrance, there is the coat of arms of Pomerania and at the top of the facade – coat of arms of the king of Prussia against a background of panoply (crossed military equipment) and allegoric images of royal virtues: Justice and Sagacity.

In the period between the world wars the palace was re-arranged into the seat of the Pomeranian State Museum (Pommersches Landesmuseum), and after World War II the building was taken over by the Museum of Western Pomerania, presently the National Museum in Szczecin. It houses exhibitions of, above all, relics of Pomeranian art from middle ages to Baroque, including Romanesque capitals from Kołbacz, early-Gothic Crucifix from Kamień Pomorski, a portrait of duke Philip I by Lucas Cranach the Younger and impressive jewels of Pomeranian dukes from the 16th and 17th centuries.

The Odra River boulevards

Boulevards are always a good choice to go to. Pedestrian zones on both sides of the river Oder are places of loads of small events such as "Bulwarove" or food truck festivals. Many people approach there to relax, chill and to admire the astounding view of the Szczecin's waterfront. An unusual experience that you might take a part in on the boulevards is a sort of aroma therapy, with a lovely smell of chocolate straight from the chocolate factory located nearby.

Obviously, it's also a good place to berth your boat there or go to one of plenty cafes and restaurants, that are always opened until nightfall. When it is hot, then you also should know, that there is an island between two banks of Oder, where a beach is located.

Szczecin's Venice

The complex of industrial buildings by the Odra River in Kolumba 86 street (near "Zachodniopomorskie Stowarzyszenie Rozwoju Gospodarczego" building's) is a unique place in our city. Historic buildings such as old yeast factory or alcohol manufacture were once the pride of industrial district reaching Tama Pomorzańska street. You can have the impression that the buildings shoot straight from the water and with the little help of imagination you can see them for example as restored hotels. The city council wants to rebuild this place as Szczecin has the potencial to become so called Venice of the North.

Miedzyodrze by kayak

Miedzyodrze is a region of flood waters and wetlands that spreads south of Szczecin bounded by the two arms of the Oder River – the Eastern and Western Oder. This area is situated within the Lower Oder Valley Landscape Park, so it is prohibited to sail there by boats with engines. Silence, calm and clear water makes Miedzyodrze a paradise for water birds, beavers, otters and rare plant species. For those eager for adventures and communing with wild and unspoiled nature the best way to see this region is by kayak, which makes it possible to discover its wild and intimate corners. While kayaking through a picturesque network of winding canals, you pass fields of forget-me-nots, kingcups, irises, ferns and hundreds of beautifully blossoming plants. From below duckweed, the limbs of dead trees stick out. Among dense bulrush you can look out for about 200 species of birds that have their hatcheries here, including herons, cormorants, sea eagles, buzzards and kingfishers.

The winding flood waters of Międzyodrze are the result of human activity. The remains of regulation works from the beginning of the 19th Century such as forgotten sluices, pumping stations, embankments, etc. make a huge impression.

Tours around Miedzyodrze are organised each week from the first Sunday in June till the middle of September, by „Miedzyodrze” Stanica Wodna (near Dziewoklicz beach). It is also possible to rent kayaks there for individual tours. Stanica is managed by the Regional Division of Szczecin PTTK – Tel. 091 434 56 24

Wiking - Kayak trips and Kayak rental

Kayak routes are an original project developed and conducted by Robert Filipowski (Wiking Szczecin) since 2009. Trips have become a tourist product of Szczecin, which was attended by over 3,000 tourists getting to know our city and Western Pomerania. This is not only canoeing on the Oder River, but also an interesting and original form of visiting Szczecin and Western Pomerania with a guide kayak or individually. The Tall Ship Races Sailing Rally crews, participants of international conferences, youth from EU projects sailed on our routes. It happened more than once that guests from Warsaw, Poznań, Katowice came by train especially for the trip. And all this to look and explore Szczecin and the surrounding area, from a kayak perspective. Łasztownia isle stretches

back to the Middle Ages. After the Allied air raids of 1942-

1944, most of the buildings on Łasztownia were destroyed.

Currently, Łasztownia is one of the most interesting (and most mysterious) places in Szczecin.

One particularly interesting spot is the part of the Old Town Wharf situated right next to the historic cranes, affectionately dubbed the "cranosaurus". Following recent renovation works,

they have regained their former splendour.

Symbols of the port of Szczecin, these historical cranes from 1929 are at their most beautiful during the cyclic events organised on the Oder river.

Urban Summer Zone

The Urban Summer Zone (or "central beach" as the residents call it) was established near the marina, on Grodzka Isle. It is an area right on the bank of the Oder designated for rest and recreation on warm summer days. It has umbrellas, sunbeds, hammocks, pillows, beach balls and sand toy sets for children. There are also real palm trees planted in the sand and atmospheric garden lanterns. The zone is open in the summer season. There is no admission fee.

Szczecin Goods "Stettiner Waren"

Artisans who want to produce original "Stettiner Waren Szczecin goods" can now aspire for the certificate and seal. The characteristic white ceramics have the opportunity to again become the showcase of our region.

The Department of Promotion and Information of the City Office in Szczecin, at the request of the City Culture Centre, has designed a word and device trademark and has begun to work on its legal protection. Towards the end of 2009, an application was submitted to the Polish Patent Office to protect the trademark "STETTINER WAREN SZCZECIN GOODS" and the expression "STETTINER WAREN". As a result, the City of Szczecin gained the right to use these trademarks. They were given to the City Culture Centre in Szczecin, where, pursuant to the decision of the Director, a Certifying Council was established, with the authority to produce and sell original Szczecin Goods.

The originals of Szczecin's white ceramics are on display in the National Museum building in the Chrobry Embankment.

Stettiner Waren Certificates

Decisions to award the certificate are made by the Certifying Council established by the Director of the City Culture Centre in Szczecin, which works on the basis of Council Rules and Regulations. The certificates and seal to label goods are given to those artisans who produce ceramics according to tradition and history, maintaining their high artistic and utilitarian value.

The application form for certificates allowing commencement of the production of ceramics under the label "Szczecin Goods" is available at the City Culture Centre in Szczecin at ul. Goleniowska 67 and on its website www.mok.szczecin.pl.

All information about ceramics, the chances of being awarded the certificate, and where to buy Szczecin Goods, is available at the City Culture Centre in Szczecin – tel. 91/46 91 639, e-mail mok.szczecin@wp.pl.

Here you will find honey, pastries, local wines, meats and many other high-quality products. Try flavors from different regions of Poland inscribed on the official list of the traditional products of Poland.

The Great Cooking

The Great Cooking takes place on the first day of Piknik. The preparation of the original dish in a big pot begins in the morning. The tasting starts after 14:00. About 10,000 portions go to the visitors. Last year we served you the West Pomeranian fish soup.

Piknik's Stage

Piknik nad Odra is accompanied by an extraordinary mix of music genres. In previous years the Piknik's stage hosted rock, pop, folk, jazz and dixiland artists. At night the stage is taken by the local electronic scene. Every year we invite dancers and gymnastics teams. The MARKET TOUR exhibitors organize short travel lectures and competitions.

Family festival

Piknik nad Odra is a spring family festival that offers attractions for both children and adults. You can find here playgrounds, an amusement park, a stage with musical performances and dance shows as well as a country fair. MARKET TOUR exhibitors also provide attractions for children.

Craft Beer Zone

Piknik is also a great place for those who like high quality beer! Microbreweries serve their specialties in the Craft Beer Zone. This year we plan to extend the zone and invite more brewers from different parts of Poland. The zone is usually placed close to the scene, so you can enjoy both great beer and good music.

Other attractions

There are standard points of the program, such as the Great Cooking or performances and concerts, but every year we also try to surprise you with new attractions. In previous years, the Picnic was accompanied by the Food Trucks Festival. Mobile restaurants from all over Poland came to Szczecin to serve cuisine from around the world. During the last edition, we were visited by an orchestra from Frankfurt (Oder), which marched through the Piknik's avenues. On our stage we hosted travelers who talked about their expeditions.

The dwarf came to Szczecin as part of the Coalition of Cities project, an element of the European Capital of Culture Wrocław 2016.

Szczecin's mosaics

There are several dozen hidden mosaic compositions and collages in Szczecin, alluding to the symbols of the city, the places where they were created, as well as completely abstract ones. They can be found on pavements, elevations or inside buildings.

Szczecin's mosaics are a project created by the city guide Joanna Olszowska and the visual artist and activist Sabina Waclawczyk. The artists undertook to create a map that helps to locate the works.

We invite you to take a walk along the trail of mosaics. A link to the current map can be found on the project fanpage:

In Griffin City, sidewalks, elevations, street lamps and gates are decorated with the image of this mythical creature, which is a symbol of the city and the region. DINING

Szymon Maksymiuk

Szczecin offers an abundance of restaurants to suit all tastes and pockets. The choice is yours but whilst here, you ought to indulge in a hearty traditional Polish meal.

Savour one of Poland's favourite meat dishes "kielbasa" (Polish sausage), and do not forget to sample the numerous pickled dishes as well. Polish food is truly flavoursome and plentiful.

In Szczecin, we have few regional dishes, such as Pasztecik, Paprykarz Szczeciński, Szczecińskie Pierniki, and Frytburger.

Paprykarz Szczeciński: A Polish canned fish spread made from ground fish, rice, tomato paste and vegetable oil, seasoned with onion, salt, and spices. The recipe was developed in the 60s on a 20th-century laboratory of Deep-Sea Fishing and Fishing Services Company "Gryf" from Szczecin. Those were the golden years of the cult can. Szczecin production finished in the early 90s. Later the brand has been used by many manufacturers.

Pasztecik - Pasztecik (Pastry) is a favourite snack of many Szczecinians and tourists. Pastries are made of deep-fried rolled yeast cake, stuffed with meat or vegetable filling. The most popular stuffings are meat and mushrooms with cheese. On the outside, the cake is crispy and slightly crunchy; inside it is tender and delicate. Pastries are usually served with spicy beetroot soup. The origins of Szczecin pastries dates back to 1969 when the first bar serving meals cooked with the use of a machine bought from the Russian army. The same bar is still serving them. In 2019, there was the 50th birthday of the bar called "Pasztecik", the one that first served pastries. The bar is located at aleja Wojska Polskiego 46.

Szczecińskie Pierniki (Szczecin's gingerbread cookies): The tradition of baking gingerbread cookies in the Pomerania region dates back to the mid-nineteenth century. Stettiner Poperkoken could be bought in all bakeries and pastry shops in the city. Sweet treats took the shape of ships, sailors, anchors, fish, and seagulls. Today, we can also boast the fragrant, edible souvenir in "Filipinka" bakery at Witkiewicza 1b street.

Frytburger - It's the local version of a kebab. It's is just meat with fries in a roll with sauces. You can always go with the vegan version without meat, which is called Bułka z Frytkami - roll with fries.

Spiżarnia Szczecińska

This place is at least as Szczecin, as Szczecin itself: you can order the "Sea Days", "Griffin's delicacy" or "Sedina's specialties". They make their own paprikash, that is one of the famous dishes from Szczecin, and process fruits and vegetables which can be tasted on the spot or taken home because Spiżarnia Szczecińska is a restaurant and shop at the same time. The place is being run by people, who love Szczecin.

Ole Bistro & Tapas

'Little Spain in the heart of Szczecin' - this is how Ole Bistro & Tapas restaurant located on the Boulevards can be described in a few words.

The idea for its creation was born in the minds of the owners long before the opening, and the search for a suitable place took over 2 years ... Having and running your own restaurant was a natural need. Inspired by the Spanish climate, they decided to move a small part of the Iberian Peninsula to their hometown. They wanted to create a unique place where the door is always open, the atmosphere is loose and joyful, and the food and wine delicious and non-standard. The choice of location was not accidental. A beautiful view of the Szczecin panorama and the flowing Odra River have made the Szczecin Bulwary an ideal place. However, before the restaurant could serve delicious Spanish food, the chefs carefully composed the menu for two months, taking care of every detail and repeatedly testing the menu items. At the end of October 2017, Ole Bistro & Tapas was officially opened. A warm, energetic place has been created, where you have the opportunity to try wonderful Spanish-European cuisine and regional specialties in a pleasant atmosphere, with a beautiful view and Spanish music in the background.

Prasad (eng: ancient orchard) is a small restaurant next to the Golden Route, near the town hall. An unsuspicious place, where Polish and Hindu cuisine meet each other. For example, you can order pancakes with peanut paste with curry and chickpeas, dumplings with lentils and onions, vegan meatballs with potatoes and cabbage, creamy carrot soup with ginger and roasted sunflower... In this restaurant you will find mostly vegan food (vegetarian option are also to be found). You can even try one of the typical Szczecin specialties: patty (Pasztecik) - vegan, of course.

Marshal Food

Marshal food is a restaurant inspired by British cuisine. From the beginning, we have received positive reviews about English breakfasts with a variety of flavors and filling. But British cuisine is not just beans and popular fish & chips. It also aromatic pies, tasty soups, good cheeses, delicious puddings. This is the taste of apples, rhubarb and great tea. Flavors penetrating dishes of colonial cuisine. On these tastes - coming from the British colonies we base our seasonal menu. Autumn brings us the smell of colorful India.

Our restaurant is not only tasty food. In warm blue-burgundy british colors you will find space for a family meal, a business meeting or an afternoon with friends.

You can talk, discuss, work, relax, laugh, have fun, have a drink, a quick lunch, a delicious dessert or a unique wine and beer. We create for you a place you will want to visit and return. See you later!

Fanaberia

The Fanaberia tea house opened its doors to you in 2003, but the idea of its creation germinated and matured much earlier.

The curiosity of the world and the journeys resulting from it became an inspiration - the closer ones, for example to Krakow, as well as those further, even to Paris. During my stay in these cities, the aura of local cafes, all these mysterious, discreet and at the same time vibrant places, had a soothing effect on me. Wanting to take at least a bit of charm of those memories with me to Szczecin, I set out on the most important journey of my life - a journey through the world of flavors and aromas. Journey through distant cultures, but also the quiet corners of home.

Taverna Cutty Sark

Ceglana

To understand this place completely, you must look at the old maps of the Fortress of Szczecin (Festung Stettin), where you can see a powerful system of fortifications. In the XIX-th century, the city began to eliminate the Stronghold, however, the underground part was left, because there was no need to liquidate it. In XXI-st century the preserved monument of defense is not to be underestimated.

In the underground part of the fortress you can find a pub. A unique place: "Ceglana" uses charm of the stronghold and combines it with a space of a large beer garden on the upper level.

City bike

A city bike is a convenient complement to standard public transport. There are almost 90 stations to choose from, and their current filling can be seen on the system page (<https://bikes-srm.pl/en/station-map/>). It can be used from March to November.

Using a city bike is not only convenient, but also inexpensive - the first 20 minutes of the ride is free, and riding below an hour costs PLN 1. The full price list of using a city bike can be viewed here (<https://bikes-srm.pl/en/price-list/>).

Registration in our system is extremely easy - just fill out a short form (<https://bikes-srm.pl/en/rejestracja/>) and deposit PLN 20 to start. Then the SMS comes with a 6-digit PIN and the login is the phone number. People who are already registered in city bike systems in cities where Nextbike is the operator do not need to register - their accounts are also valid in Szczecin.

The account on a city bike works on a pre-paid basis (like a prepaid phone) - after renting a vehicle, the funds are removed from our account.
